

Evan Greene

Eleven years ago, Evan's life changed forever when he was diagnosed with myasthenia gravis (MG) at age 34. Once a strong, athletic person, Evan's condition has left him much thinner, with little strength and muscle tone, and has eliminated his ability to do many of the physical things that used to bring him much happiness.

Though he is no longer able to participate in rigorous physical activities as he once did, Evan is thankful that his MG has not progressed.

"While it has taken away most of my strength, the one thing that MG has given me is a greater appreciation for the blessings I do have," Evan said. "I am thankful for friends, family and life's simpler pleasures."

Rather than let remorse and sadness consume him and prevent him from living life to its fullest, Evan simply focuses on putting one foot in front of the other and forging ahead.

"We cannot change our past, and we cannot change our present, but we have control of what we want our future to be."

To learn more about how you can help create a world without MG, visit <http://www.myasthenia.org/HowcanIhelp.aspx>.